Dear Sir or Madam:

Each Office Is Independently Owned And Operated.

I am writing you to express my concerns with public knowledge of food irradiation.

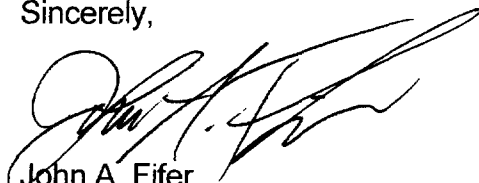

Since the ingredients of all food and supplement products are required, I feel that any treatment or modification to those ingredients, in this case irradiation, should be CLEARLY VISIBLE on the label of the product. This labeling should not be a flower-like symbol; It should have the words IRRADIATED on the package. When BHT is added to a food-product or the product's packaging, it is clearly marked at the end of the ingredient label.

I am a concerned consumer and feel it is my duty to express my feelings, to protect fellow consumers and I who may not be aware of the potential and needless hazard of food irradiation.

If food irradiation is going to be an allowable practice, the American public should have the right to choose between foods that are and are not treated by irradiation. The best way to this end is by prominent labeling as such.

Many other American consumers and I thank you for your time and attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

John A. Fifer
Sales Associate
